

Navigating Impasses in Bioethics: End of Life, Disability, and Mental Illness

Friday 8 December 2017, Von Hügel Institute, St Edmund's College, Cambridge

CONTRIBUTORS

Brian Brock is Reader in Moral and Practical Theology, and a member of the Centre for Spirituality, Health and Disability, School of Divinity, University of Aberdeen. He is also the Editor of the Journal of Disability and Religion (Francis & Taylor), and a Visiting Scholar at the Friedrich Alexander Universität, Erlangen-Nürnberg, and the Duke Divinity School. His research interest include the ethics of new technology, the use of the Bible in Christian ethics, disability and political theology, and medical ethics. Selected publications include: Captive to Christ, Open to the World: On Doing Christian Ethics in Public (Cascade, 2014), Christian Ethics in a Technological Age (Eerdmans, 2010), (co-edited with John Swinton) Theology, Disability and the New Genetics: Why Science Needs the Church (T&T Clark, 2007).

Gemma Clarke is Research Associate at the Department of Public Health and Primary Care, School of Clinical Medicine, University of Cambridge, and Project Lead on the Future Care Study which examines feeding issues at the end of life for those with progressive neurological disease. Her research interest include decision-making capacity, informed consent, progressive neurological disease, palliative and end of life care. Before joining the Department of Public Health and Primary Care, Gemma completed her PhD at the Institute of Criminology, Gonville and Caius College. Selected publications and presentations include: (co-author) 'Substituted or supported decisions? Examining models of decision-making within inter-professional team decision-making for individuals at risk of lacking decision-making capacity' in Salloch, S. Sandow, V. Schildmann, J. and Vollmann, J. (eds.) Ethics and Professionalism in Healthcare: Transition and Challenges (Routledge, 2016); Public attitudes towards assisted dying at the end of life in the USA and UK, poster presentation at: Palliative Care Conference, Glasgow (March 2016).

Thana de Campos is Adjunct Professor in the Faculty of Law, and Research Fellow at the Global Strategy Lab, University of Ottawa, and Research Associate at the Von Hügel Institute for Critical Catholic Inquiry, Cambridge. She is also Research Scholar at the UNESCO's Chair in Bioethics and Human Rights, Rome, and at Blackfriars Hall, Oxford, and the co-founder of Academics Stand Against Poverty (ASAP) in Brazil, together with the Brazilian Ministry of Public Affairs. Thana's research interests include bioethics, legal theory, and moral philosophy, with particular interests in Natural Law, Virtue Ethics, global health law, global health governance, and the human right to health. She has recently published her first book The Global Health Crisis: Ethical Responsibilities (Cambridge University Press, 2017), which is based on her doctoral thesis in Jurisprudence at the University of Oxford. Other publications include: (co-editor) The Philosophical Foundations of Medical Law, Oxford, The Philosophical Foundations of Law (Oxford University Press, 2018 forthcoming); Zika,

Public Health, and the distraction of abortion, in Journal of Medicine, Health Care and Philosophy (2016); The Wellbeing Conception of Health and the Conflation Problem, in The New Bioethics, 22: 1 (2016); The idea Patents vs. the Idea of University, in The New Bioethics Journal, 21: 2 (2015).

David Elliot is Assistant Professor of Moral Theology and Ethics, School of Theology and Religious Studies, Catholic University of America, and Research Associate at the Von Hügel Institute for Critical Catholic Inquiry, Cambridge. David came to the Catholic University of America in 2017 after a 3-year postdoctoral fellowship as Research Associate in Theological Ethics at Cambridge University. His research focuses on virtue ethics and the thought of St. Thomas Aquinas; including work on the theological virtue of hope, Scripture and ethics, and the art of dying. He received his Ph.D. in moral theology at the University of Notre Dame in 2014. He has worked on ethical and social issues with the Catholic Bishops Conference of England and Wales, as well as members of the British House of Lords, and he is an ethics analyst for the BBC. His first book is Hope and Christian Ethics, Cambridge University Press (2017). Other publications include: The Turn to Classification in Virtue Ethics: A Review Essay, in Studies in Christian Ethics 29.4 (2016), 477–488; Defining the Relationship Between Health and Well-being in Bioethics, in The New Bioethics 22.1 (2016): 4-17; The Theological Virtue of Hope and the Art of Dying, in Studies in Christian Ethics 29.3 (2016): 301-307. Recently his work on hope was awarded the $4000 Essay and Book Prize from the Character Project of the Templeton Foundation for contribution to the study of character.

Elizabeth Fistein is Specialty Director in Ethics & Law, University of Cambridge School of Clinical Medicine, Medical Member of the First Tier Tribunal (Mental Health), and Member of the University of Cambridge Psychology Research Ethics Committees. She trained as a Psychiatrist in Manchester and Cambridge, and has worked as a Consultant Psychiatrist in both General Adult Psychiatry and Rehabilitation Psychiatry. Her research focuses on legal issues connected to consent to treatment and mental capacity, empirical ethics in psychiatry, and medical education (particularly ethics and professionalism education). She is part of the NHS Future Care Study on decision-making concerning eating and drinking for people with progressive neurological disease with and without decision-making capacity. Recent publications include: 'Tensions between policy and practice: a qualitative analysis of decisions regarding compulsory admission to psychiatric hospital' in International Journal of Law and Psychiatry, 46: 50-57 (2016); 'Patient first: ethics and ontology of nursing care' in Annals of Nursing and Practice 1(3): 1013 (2014); 'Clinical ambiguities in the assessment of capacity' in Mental Capacity Legislation: Principles & Practice, Royal College of Psychiatrists (2013); 'Conceptions of the good and the Mental Capacity Act' in Autonomy and Mental Health (Oxford University Press, 2012).

Alberto García is Director of the UNESCO Chair in Bioethics and Human Rights, and Professor of Philosophy of Law and International Law School of Bioethics, Athenaeum Pontificium Regina Apostolorum, Rome. He has been awarded his doctorate in Law by the Complutense University in Madrid, where he is currently a researcher of the Human Rights Institute. For 5 years he has been member of the Steering Committee of Bioethics in the Council of Europe and in 2005 he has been honoured with the National Prize of the Spanish Royal Academy of Doctors in the field of legal and social sciences. He has extensive experience in several fields of ethics, such as bioethics, environmental ethics, science ethics, technology ethics, and ethics education. He has coordinated and published several books regarding different aspects of bioethics, including The Destiny of Frozen Embryos, Fundación Universitaria Española (FUE), Madrid, (2003), Biotechnology and Ethics: Stem

Cells and Human Cloning, APRA, Rome (2008), and Human Cloning: Ethical and Legal Aspects, APRA, Rome (2008).

David Albert Jones is Director of the Anscombe Bioethics Centre, Oxford, Research Fellow in Bioethics at Blackfriars Hall, Oxford, and Research Fellow in the centre for Bioethics and emerging Technologies, St Mary's University, Twickenham. He is Vice-Chair of the Ministry of Defence Research Ethics Committee, and serves on the steering group of the 'End of Life Care Audit - Dying in Hospital'. He is a member of the Health and Social Care Advisory Group and the Department of Christian Responsibility and Citizenship of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of England and Wales, and of the Commission of the Bishops' Conferences of the EU (COMECE) Working Group on Ethics in Research and Medicine. His most famous books include The Soul of the Embryo: An enquiry into the status of the human embryo in the Christian tradition (Continuum, 2004), and Approaching the End: a theological exploration of death and dying (Oxford University Press, 2007). In 2009 he was a member of a working party of the General Medical Council which helped draft its 2010 guidance on Treatment and Care Towards the End of Life and was also on the National Reference Group of the Liverpool Care Pathway for the Dying Patient. He has contributed to a number of documents of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of England and Wales, including A Practical Guide to the Spiritual Care of the Dying Person (CTS, 2010), and The Mental Capacity Act: A Practical Guide (CTS, 2010).

William Junker is Assistant Professor of Catholic Studies at St Thomas University, MN, and Co-Director of the Terrence J. Murphy Institute for Catholic Thought, Law and Public Policy. He obtained his MA in Philosophy from Notre Dame University, and a PhD from the John U. Nef Committee on Social Thought and the Department of English, University of Chicago (2011). His research interests are English Renaissance Poetry and Drama, Literary Criticism and Theory, and History of Political Thought. Publications include: Spenser, Plato, and Platonism, in A. Escobedo (ed.) Edmund Spenser in Context, Cambridge University Press (forthcoming); Benedict Among the Brambles: A Revisionary Reading of Gregory the Great's Life of Benedict, The Journal of Religion & Literature 45.3 (2013): 1-24; Spenser's Unarmed Cupid and the Experience of the 1590 Faerie Queene, ELH 79.1 (2012): 59-83.

Trudo Lemmens is the Scholl Chair in Health Law and Policy, and Assistant Professor at the Department of Psychiatry, University of Toronto, a Member of the University of Toronto Joint Centre for Bioethics, and Member of the Advisory Committee on Health Research of the Pan American Health Organization and of the Board of the Ontario Mental Health Foundation. He has been a member of the School of Social Science of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, a Visiting Fellow of the Royal Flemish Academy of Belgium for Science and the Arts, and a Visiting Professor at the University of Otago (New Zealand), K.U.Leuven; St. Anne's College, University of Oxford. He is the editor of Regulating Creation: The Law, Policy and Ethics of Assisted Human Reproduction, and Law and Ethics in Biomedical Research: Regulation, Conflict of Interest, and Liability (University of Toronto Press, 2017), and numerous chapters and articles on ethics and mental health in international law, policy, medicine and bioethics journals, including (with L. Charland, and K. Wada) 'Decision-Making Capacity to Consent for Medical Assistance in Dying for Persons with Mental Disorders' in Open Issue Journal of Ethics in Mental Health 1-15 (2016); and 'The Conflict between Open-ended Access to Physician-Assisted Dying and the Protection of the Vulnerable: Lessons from Belgium's Euthanasia Regime for the Canadian Post-Carter Era' in C. Régis, L. Khoury, R. Kouri, Les Grands Conflits en Droit de la Santé (Yvon Blais, 2016).

Patrick McKearney is Teaching Associate in the Division of Social Anthropology, University of Cambridge, where he completed his PhD in 2016 with a dissertation based on over a year's fieldwork in a L'Arche community in the UK. Before starting his PhD he studied for two degrees in Theology and Religious Studies in the Faculty of Divinity, University of Cambridge. Patrick's research specialises in Anthropology of Religion, Christianity, and Ethics, working across a multiplicity of academic disciplines, and non-academic contexts, and aims to build bridges to moral philosophy, theological ethics, and broader discussions about the moral agency and dignity of those with disabilities, receiving care, and dependent on social welfare. Selected articles: 'Everyday Ethics' in Lamb and Williams (eds), Everyday Ethics: Moral Theology Meets Anthropology and the Social Sciences (Oxford University Press, forthcoming); L'Arche, Learning Disability and Domestic Citizenship: Dependent Political Belonging in a Contemporary British City, in City & Society. (2017); The Genre of Judgment: Description and Difficulty in the Anthropology of Ethics, Journal of Religious Ethics (2016).

Gonzalo Miranda LC is the Dean of the Faculty of Bioethics at the Athenaeum Pontificium Regina Apostolorum, Rome, where is also member of the Board of Directors of the UNESCO Chair in Bioethics and Human Rights. He is also member of the Directive Council of FIBIP (International Federation of Centers and Institutes of Personalistic Bioethics), Chairman of the 'Special Interest Group – Bioethics and PCH' of the European Society for Person Centered Healthcare, and he was the delegate of the Holy See to the UNESCO during the elaboration of the Universal Declaration on Bioethics and Human Rights. He has taught courses in bioethics, philosophical ethics, moral theology and in the last 25 years he has given more than 400 lectures in more than 300 cities in several countries. Selected publications include: La bioetica dalla prospettiva della donna (Editori Riuniti, 2015); Religious Perspectives on Human Vulnerability in Bioethics (Springer, 2014); Eutanasia: la antropología pro-eutanasia y la antropología cristiana, (Ateneo Pontificio Regina Apostolorum, 2008); Aborto: la vera 'questione morale del nostro temp', in Studia Bioethica 2-3 (2008); 'Bioethical Challenges for the Catholic Church in Europe', in The National Catholic Bioethics Center, 187-201 (2006).

Annabel Price is Associate Specialist Director for Palliative Care at the Cambridge Institute of Public Health, University of Cambridge, and Consultant Liaison Psychiatrist at Addenbrooke's Hospital, Cambridge. She was previously a Clinical Research Worker at Department of Psychological Medicine, Institute of Psychiatry, King's College London. Her research interest include the interface between mental health and assisted dying, and she authored a research paper on the desire for hastened death in people with life-limiting conditions. Selected publications: Mental capacity as a safeguard in assisted dying: clarity is needed, BMJ 351:h4461 (2015); Concepts of mental capacity for patients requesting assisted suicide: a qualitative analysis of expert evidence presented to the Commission on Assisted Dying, BMC Medical Ethics 15:32 (2014); Debate: Psychiatric assessment should be mandatory for patients requesting assisted suicide, General Hospital Psychiatry 36;1:7-9 (2013); Illness perceptions, adjustment to illness and depression in a palliative population. Journal of Pain and Symptom Management May; 43 (5): 819-32 (2012).

Lidia Ripamonti is Research Associate at the Von Hügel Institute for Critical Catholic Inquiry, Cambridge, where she helps coordinating the research strand on health and bioethics. Before coming to Cambridge, she was Assistant Lecturer in Philosophy of Religion at the University of Dresden. Her current research focuses on phenomenology, personhood, end of life, disability, autism, and ill-health. Recent publications include: 'Dasein', 'Geworfenheit', 'Geborgensein', 'Heidegger, Martin', 'Man', in M. Knaup, H. Seubert (eds.), Edith Stein – Lexikon, Freiburg: Herder (2017); review of Andrew Sloane's 'Vulnerability and Care: Christian Reflections on the Philosophy of Medicine', Reviews in Religion and Theology, 24:3 (2017); Disability, Diversity, and Autism: Philosophical Perspectives on Health, The New Bioethics, 22: 1 (2016); Fenomenologia dell'essere umano e analisi dell'Esserci, Bello, Ales A., Alfieri, F., Shahid, M. (eds), Edith Stein, Hedwig Conrad-Martius, Gerda Walther. Fenomenologia della Persona, della Vita e della Comunità (Laterza, 2011).

Elizabeth Schiltz is Professor of Law and the Thomas J. Abood Research Scholar at University of St. Thomas School of Law, Co-Director of the Terrence J. Murphy Institute for Catholic Thought, Law and Public Policy (MN), and a member of the Board of Directors of American National Catholic Partnership on Disability. She received the 2007 Dean's Award for Outstanding Scholarship and was elected Professor of the Year by the graduating class of 2007. In 2014, she was recognized with the Good Sister Award by St. Thomas' University Advocates for Women and Equity. She is a graduate of the Partners in Policymaking Academy, a nationwide, state-based training program in disability advocacy. Selected publications include: Voting Rights for Persons with Cognitive Disabilities (invited contribution to symposium on the ADA at 25: The Continued Inequality of Americans with Disabilities, forthcoming 2016); Finding Common Ground in the Disability Rights Critiques of Selective Abortions in M. Esser, J. Murray, and R. West (eds) Search of Common Ground on Abortion (Ashgate, 2014); 'Exposing the Cracks in the Foundations of Disability Law', in Transnational Law & Contemporary Problems 23 (2012).

Irene Tuffrey-Wijne is Associate Professor in Intellectual Disability and Palliative Care, at Kingston University and St George's, University of London, and the Chair of the European Association for Palliative Care (EAPC) Taskforce on People with Intellectual Disabilities. Irene qualified as a nurse in Amsterdam before moving to the UK and completing a degree in palliative care nursing and a PhD in the palliative care of people with intellectual disabilities (learning disabilities). She has close collaborative links with Maastricht University in the Netherlands where she leads a programme of research aimed at improving the health care and end of life care of people with intellectual disabilities. A key aspect of her research is the involvement of people with intellectual disabilities as participants, advisors and co-researchers. She is the author of EAPC White Paper on 'Consensus Norms for Palliative Care of People with Intellectual Disabilities in Europe' and translated the full annual report of the Euthanasia Committees in the Netherlands for the members of the UK's House of Lords. Other selected publications include: 'Investigating the factors that affect the communication of death-related bad news to people with intellectual disabilities by staff in residential and supported living services: an interview study', in Journal Of Intellectual Disability Research (2017); Developing research, policy and practice in palliative care for people with intellectual disabilities will benefit everyone, in Palliative Medicine, 30(7) (2016); 'Do-Not-Attempt-Resuscitation orders for people with intellectual disabilities: dilemmas and uncertainties for ID physicians and trainees. The importance of the deliberation process', in Journal of Intellectual Disability Research (2016); End-of-life decision-making for people with intellectual disability from the perspective of nurses, in Journal of Policy And Practice In Intellectual Disabilities, 12(4) (2015).